This is the first time that the incredible movement of the players has been made available in a video game, providing a more realistic and believable experience. The technology captures every aspect of real football life including bodyweight, intensity of the player, and ball movements during the course of the game. Additional motion capture data from live games for 24 players has been recorded and is being added to the game engine. FIFA 20 introduced a "Neo Motion" Engine, which allowed for "explicit control of player movements" and controls "more intuitively and naturally." "By combining real-life player data with an advanced physics engine, we were able to make every player on the pitch feel unique and authentic," said Steve Rabuchin, Co-Founder and CEO of Reftek. "This is the first time that this real-life data has been used to power the gameplay of a video game, and by using this technology, we can deliver more realistic, believable movements that will delight fans and players, on any device." "For the game to feel as realistic as possible, there is no better type of player than the player who is trained and has played the game for every season of their life," said Kevin Chou, Co-Founder and COO of Reftek. "By integrating real-life player data into our game engine, we are able to deliver unprecedented realism." "Based on the experiences of the games we've played, teams will now have to adapt to play differently as the motion of the players will no longer be as natural," said FIFA 19 Global Creative Director Mert Can. "With "HyperMotion Technology," you'll witness teams make opponents move differently, which will create a great battle on the pitch." "The 'Ultra Real Player Animation' will allow players to express their unique game play, along with the 'MVP' animations, which will show the consistency and effort of the players in high tempo games," said Kobe Bryant, EA Sports "FIFA" Brand Director. "I know that I will enjoy this game more than other games I played in the past, because I believe this game will simulate the game experience I have experienced over the years of playing." said Cristiano Ronaldo, EA SPORTS "FIFA" Brand Creative Ambassador. A notable part of the "Ultra Real Player Animation" is the accurate

Features Key:

- Unparalleled Player Intelligence.
- Move, shoot, pass, dribble, and score with ease in FIFA 22 – the new ball physics mean that you'll feel more in control and ball flight and control than ever before.
- Find the balance between attack and defence with a new-for-FIFA control scheme: Master your timing with new Tactical First Touch (TFT) control, which improves touch, makes it easier to play in deeper positions, and lowers the touch requirements on more-difficult passes.
- Enjoy familiar, in-depth ways of playing that are fully optimised for intelligent controls, including pitch awareness and realistic player controls and abilities. It also makes it easy to choose your own playing style: create your own customised player skill progression curve for all 11 national teams.
- Experience a living, breathing pitch that reacts to your actions, turning and bending mid-action.
- AI systems and functionality to address aspects of on-pitch gameplay that have been missing from the series, most notably off-the-ball movement and player recognition.
- The ability to select from over 2,500 unique jerseys and hats, create player items, and export them as part of your Master League collection.
- Updated visuals for stadiums that feel more real and alive, with detailed backdrops and snow, plus new crowd animations, signals and chants.
- Up to 4 human players, 7 challenges (including Be a Pro and Ultimate Team modes) and 5 game modes, including Beach and Beach Volley.
- Pause, dribble and rotate the ball to play a one-touch or pass-and-shoot move.
- Full ball physics give player movement and ball flight more control than ever, and improved animations help bring life to your players.
- FIFA 22 will run on Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC. The game is also available to play on Xbox 360 and PlayStation 3 via download via Xbox Live and PlayStation Network
